This second of an initial series of three John La Rose Annual Memorial Lectures commemorates the life and work of John La Rose (1927–2006). John was an inspirational presence in black British and Caribbean political and cultural activism who touched lives across all five continents. The issues he was engaged with all his life remain relevant and will continue to be so into the foreseeable future.

Jayne Cortez is a major international poet, who has long been active in the struggle for black social liberation and for radical, political and social change in the USA.
