1. Module Leader

   Michael Gill

Biography. I have worked and studied at the University of Liverpool since 2009. My research includes media analysis of historical events, international labour laws, international relations, and social history. My current research uses working-class writers with links to Merseyside as case studies to explore changing literary trends in 1930s, 40s, and 50s.

2. Module Description

   This module explores different representations of Liverpool through the ages to ask what they tell us about the city’s past and present. Each two-hour session will consist of a lecture, discussion, and critical analysis of sources related to Liverpool's transforming cityscape in literature and film. Students will also visit the Museum of Liverpool. Analysing primary and secondary sources about the City’s history will encourage students to make valued judgments and informed discussions. Students will develop transferable skills relevant to employment, i.e. team-work, interpersonal skills, oral presentation skills, and critical thinking.

Module Aims

This module aims to:

- To develop confidence in understanding and communicating complex ideas.
- To develop skills in research and collaborative learning.
- To learn about aspects of Liverpool's history through literary and visual representations.

3. Content

   The following topics will be considered on the module:
1. From Redburn to Regeneration: How literature portrays the port of Liverpool.
3. Filmed for posterity: Of Time and the City.
4. Liverpool on Film in the 1980s: Boys from the Blackstuff, and No Surrender.
5. Visit to the Museum of Liverpool to explore the artefacts on display to analyse how the city depicts its transformation through the ages.

4. Module structure

The module will be delivered over a three-week period in six two-hour sessions (four hours per week, total 12 hours contact time). The penultimate session in week 5 will consist of a visit to the Museum of Liverpool. The final meeting in week 6 will include an assessment session.

Each session will take the form of an interactive seminar, mini lecture or workshop. The students will demonstrate an awareness of how the city of Liverpool is represented in literature, film, and television. Students will have ample opportunities to demonstrate an increased mastery of research, communication, and analytical skills through the tasks and group discussions completed throughout the course.

In addition, it is expected that students will spend 38 study hours outside of the classroom contact hours on activities including assigned reading, optional reading of areas of personal interest, homework tasks, web research and preparation for assessment.

5. Teaching methods

The teaching approach will include the following:

- Taught sessions
- Small group working
- Group discussions
- Group Presentations
- Workshops

6. Assessment:

2x 10-question multi choice/short answer questions, one paper to be taken during week 2 and one during week 3 of each 3 week module - 50% of final grade and 15 minute group presentation or 5-10 minute individual presentation/Q&A session (may be live, audio or video) – 50% of final mark.

Standard University policies apply with regard to late submission of assessments. There is no re-assessment opportunity.
7. Course structure:

The course will be both theoretical and practical in nature, with the sessions focused on giving the students as much hands on experience as possible, and encouraging them to apply their ideas throughout.

The Indicative schedule is as follows:

Session One:
1. From Redburn to Regeneration: How literature portrays the port of Liverpool. The course will begin with some general information about the module, including the aims and information regarding the assessment. Then it moves on to consider the importance of how literature portrays the port of Liverpool, particularly the dock area. The class will close read extracts from several books and discuss if their depictions provide fair or bias reflections of the city of Liverpool.

Session Two:
2. Moneylenders, Dockers and Slummies: Reading Liverpool in the early decades of the twentieth-century. This session looks specifically at the industrial heartland of the Liverpool's waterfront and further afield. As a group, we will read extracts from primary and secondary source material about the communities who lived in close proximity to the city's port, including first-hand accounts from workers and sailors who resided in the city.

Session Three:
3. Filmed for posterity: Of Time and the City. The film Of Time and the City by filmmaker and writer Terence Davies is a personal journey that captures more than two decades of Liverpool's transformation in the mid 20th century. This session analyses several clips from the documentary to discuss how Davies captures the changing cityscape and how it informs our knowledge of Merseyside's history. In addition, the group will consider interviews with the writer, together with reviews from the media and film industry.

Session Four:
4. Liverpool on Film in the 1980s: Boys from the Blackstuff, and No Surrender. The 1980s in Liverpool was a time of contrasts. High unemployment, a decrease in industry, rising social tensions, regeneration, success and despair in the sporting world, whilst providing the world with innovative music and entertainment. This session explores how the television drama by screenwriters such as Alan Bleasdale and Jimmy McGovern depicted the mixed fortunes of the city by using humour, seriousness, and compassion.

Session Five:
5. Visit to the Museum of Liverpool to explore the artefacts on display to analyse how the city depicts its transformation through the ages. "The Museum of Liverpool reflects the city's global significance through its unique geography, history and culture." This week we will visit the museum as a group to investigate if or how the city of Liverpool uses historical representations in film and literature to promote its image in the present day.

Session Six:
In this final session, the group will read and examine extracts from a 21st century novel by a Liverpool author and, reflecting upon the sources analysed in previous weeks, consider how it compares to earlier works. The second part of the class will be dedicated to one part of the module assessment and consist of group or individual presentations.

7. Learning outcomes

On completion of this module, students will be able to:
