Wednesday 7th March 2018

5.00-6.30pm

Rendall Building, Lecture Theatre 8,
University of Liverpool Campus, L69 7ZQ

Presented by Dr Karim Eid-Sabbagh this film screening features the documentary of Karim alongside independent journalist Paul Cochrane investigating the political economy of water in Lebanon – how the flows of water are shaped by power and capital.

Filmed in the wake of the July 2015 trash crisis, the film highlights the dangerous impact environmental degradation is having on the country and its water resources, and how in the face of governmental disregard for ecological concerns the public is starting to mobilize in order to protect a common resource.
