For the LPC you must hold a qualifying law degree or a GDL or similar qualification.

For the Bar Professional Training Course, you will need a qualifying English law degree (2:2 minimum) or an international equivalent from an approved Law School.

Option A

- Other qualifying law degree
  - Usually three years
  - LLB at the University of Liverpool: Qualifying Law Degree three year course

- Non qualifying law degree or other degree
  - Usually three years
  - Graduate Diploma in Law One year full time

- LLM Legal Practice Course
  - Seven or ten months full-time

- Bar Professional Training Course
  - One year full time

- Foreign Practitioner Exam
  - + three years legal practice experience

- Training Contract
  - Two years including Professional Skills Course

- Qualify in Singapore

Call to the bar
To practise law in Singapore, you must have first applied for and obtained a practising certificate (‘PC’) issued by the Registrar of the Supreme Court (the ‘Registrar’).

A PC is required to be applied for every practice year commencing 1 April of a calendar year and ending 31 March the following calendar year. A PC for any practice year may therefore commence on any date after 1 April of a calendar year but will automatically expire every 31 March of the following calendar year.

For further information please visit the Singaporean Law Society:-
https://www.lawsociety.org.sg/

Correct as of February 2017