

Law with a Year Abroad

Do you want to study abroad?

At the University of Liverpool, we believe in helping students become global citizens with a wide range of employability skills to help them succeed in the international and inter-cultural employment market after graduation. To support our students in gaining these invaluable skills, we offer the opportunity for you to study abroad for a year as part of the Law with a Year Abroad (M111) programme. You will spend the 3rd year of your studies at one of our European or International partner institutions studying law and/or social sciences related modules.

Why study abroad?

Reports from the Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE) tell us that students who participate in study abroad:

- Are more likely to be in further education or employment 6 months after graduating
- Earn higher than average salaries
- Are more likely to graduate with a 2:1 or First Class degree

Studies of UK and European businesses show that the UK's top employers think that Study Abroad makes graduates more employable, whilst European businesses with international links are looking for graduates who have had some form of international experience.

There are also the academic and personal benefits to Study Abroad:

- Improved study techniques
- Increased self-awareness & self-reliance
- Inspires their future career or study choices

What funding is available?

Funding your period of Study Abroad is important to all students and requires some careful planning. Luckily, there are lots of funding opportunities available to students, both from the University of Liverpool and from other organisations.
