Part A: Subject Component Summary Information

1. Subject component title:
   - English

2. Award which the component will contribute to:
   - ☒ BA (Hons)
   - ☐ BSc (Hons)
   - ☐ Other. Please specify:

3. Subject Component type:
   - ☐ Minor (25%)
   - ☐ Joint (50%)
   - ☒ Major (75%)

4. Credit:
   - Credit in year 1 (level 4) 90
   - Credit in year 2 (level 5) 90
   - Credit in year 3 (level 6) 90

5. Date of first intake:
   - September 2014

6. Frequency of intake:
   - Annual September (full time)

7. Duration and mode of study:
   - Three years full-time

8. Applicable framework:
   - Model for Non-Clinical First Degree Programmes

   Framework exemption required:
   - ☒ No (please go to section 9)
   - ☐ Yes (please provide a brief summary below)

   Date exemption approved by AQSC:

9. Applicable Ordinance:
   - Ordinance 37(A) General Ordinance for Undergraduate Degrees
New/revised Ordinance required: ☒ No (please go to section 9)

Please indicate the applicable boxes:

Part B: Subject Component Aims & Objectives

26. Aims of the subject component

The aims of the subject component are to offer students the opportunity to engage with the study of English at University level and, in proportions appropriate to specialisations in literature or language, to be able:

28. Skills and Other Attributes

No. Skills and attributes:

- formal examinations
- assessed essays
- coursework, project work

3.2 'analyse tests and discourses, and respond to the affective power of language'

3.1 'critical, theoretical, linguistic and stylistic concepts and terminology'

3.2 'develop independent and imaginative interpretations of literary material'

3.1 'the role of readers in shaping texts'

3.1 'how culture, language, technology, and economics affect how, where and by whom texts are produced and received'

3.2 'apply scholarly bibliographic skills appropriate to the subject'
1. Contextualise, reflect upon, organise and manipulate subject specific knowledge so as to arrive at viable topics for investigation and appropriate methods for such investigation;

2. Assimilate varied kinds of information;

3. Read and analyse sophisticated texts with a view to forming well-grounded interpretations and conclusions;

4. Select, analyse and interpret critically a range of theoretical positions and types of evidence, including different kinds of discourse;

5. Construct a cogent argument or account, drawing pertinently upon the available evidence and with due consideration of alternative perspectives;

6. Exercise independence in reasoning and judgement;

7. Take informed account of the power of language to reflect, construct and influence beliefs;

8. Write effectively in an appropriate formal register;

9. Manage time and work to deadlines;

10. Exploit IT resources effectively, including use of word-processing skills and a range of other resources;

11. Work independently towards self-selected goals;

12. Develop the potential to utilise all of these skills in appropriate ways in their subsequent careers.

29. Career opportunities:

Graduates of this subject component may embark upon a wide range of careers, depending in part on their choice of Minor subject component. Relevant fields include journalism, arts administration, creative media, management, public relations, librarianship and publishing. Many may go on to train as teachers, both of mother tongue and of English as a Foreign Language. Others may do conversion courses for law, accounting, etc., or take up posts in retailing and industry, where the flexibility of their intellectual training is valued. Others may continue with postgraduate study in a variety of disciplines.

30. Academic Requirements:

A level offer: banded offer AAB/ABB
Subject requirements: A level English (Literature or Language) at grade A
Scottish Higher/Advanced Higher: AAABB including A in English at Advanced Higher
International Baccalaureate: 35-33 with minimum 6 in English at Higher Level
Irish Leaving Certificate: A1 A1 A1 B1 including A1 in English
BTEC: Acceptable when combined with A level English grade A
Access: Access to HE Diploma in Humanities/Social Sciences to include Distinctions from units in English.
14-19 Advanced Diploma: Any line accepted

Part C: Entrance Requirements

Part D: Subject Component Structure
33. Subject Component Structure:

1. As with all primarily skills-based educational subject components, achievement of the outcomes does not occur in straightforward linear increments. As the first aim of the subject component makes explicit, the focus is on analytical and interpretative skills: the acquisition of knowledge is seen not simply as an end in itself but as an essential enabling element of the process of developing those skills. Therefore we typically talk below about specific aspects of the subject component as ‘contributing to’ the learning outcomes rather than as ‘meeting’ any particular outcome. The achievement of the outcomes is a progressive result of the subject component as a whole.

2. At the same time, the subject component is designed to embody demonstrable progression from one level to the next. This is achieved primarily by differentiation of learning outcomes. Students achieve increased depth and breadth in their knowledge and skills as they progress through the levels, along parameters outlined below. At the same time, there is also progression in terms of content, from foundational knowledge and skills at Level 4, to period overview and/or major analytical approaches at Level 5, and to increased specialisation and independence of learning at Level 6.

3. In each of the 3 years, students are normally required to take units to the value of 90 credits in English.

1.1 Level 4

1. Level 4 occupies the first year of study for full-time students. It is a “Preliminary” level which does not count towards the final degree but which is designed to offer a grounding in the knowledge and skills that are necessary to undertake the Honours modules at Levels 5 and 6, by providing the students with: experience of literary study from chronological, generic and thematic perspectives; training in close and critical reading skills and methodologies in English Literature; knowledge of structures of the English Language; training in applying basic analytical categories in the English Language and interpreting the findings; and practice in essay-writing and discussion skills, with a focus on developing the skills involved in effective writing. All Level 4 modules are compulsory: each semester students take three 15-credit modules in English.

2. The Level 4 English modules are as follows:

   Semester 1
   - ENGL111 Literature in Time
   - ENGL103 Close Reading
   - ENGL101 Describing English Language

   Semester 2
   - ENGL112 Shakespeare: Ways of Thinking
   - ENGL113 Ways of Reading
   - ENGL110 English Language: Variation and Context

1.2 Level 5

1. Level 5 Literature provision is designed as period courses providing an overview of the major periods of literary history.

2. To ensure that individual subject components of study include familiarity with earlier literature, students who opt for any Literature modules must normally take a minimum of 30 credits on designated ‘starred’ (usually pre-1800) periods. This requirement is normally fulfilled at Level 5, but provision to fulfil this criterion exists at Level 6. The ‘starred’ modules are asterisked in the list below.

3. Language provision at Level 5 is designed to offer students a sample of major approaches to the analysis of language and text. The modules build on the familiarity with basic analytical and interpretative concepts introduced at Level 4 and extend them in a range of ways.

4. The modules currently available at Level 5 are shown in the table below. All modules are worth 30 credits and are normally uncapped. Modules with appropriate Literature or Language content taught in other departments are also accepted as part of the subject component. A typical example is IRIS219 A Terrible Beauty: Yeats.

Semester 1

*ENGL213 Drama 1580-1720
*ENGL272 Restoration and C18th Lit
ENGL243 Victorian Literature
ENGL201 American Literature
ENGL274 Pragmatics
ENGL276 Language in Society

Semester 2

*ENGL270 Medieval Narratives
*ENGL236 Renaissance Poetry & Prose
ENGL218 Romantic Literature
ENGL232 Modernist Literature
ENGL275 Creativity
ENGL221 The History of English
ENGL202 Psycholinguistics

5. Students will choose one of these 30-credit modules per semester. In addition, unless they are taking SOTA300 Placement module year-long, they will take one of the following 15-credit modules taught in other departments in the Faculty per semester.

Semester 1
LATI203 Latin America and its Literature
COMM225 Human Voices

Semester 2
MODL203 The Italian Cinema
MODL205 German Cinema from the Expressionism to the Present
COMM205 Hollywood Cinema
HLAC200 Living in the Global Eighteenth Century

1.3 Level 6
1. At Level 6 Literature modules are designed to allow greater specialisation and generic and/or thematic focus against the background of period knowledge provided by the modules at Level 5. Language modules are intended to further extend the range and scope of the students’ familiarity with linguistic enquiry: topic areas are covered which lend themselves to independent empirical research.
2. Students may only take Language modules at Level 6 if they have successfully completed a minimum of 30 credits of Language at Level 5. The exception to this rule is ENGL383 Language and Literature.
3. The choice of modules currently on offer in Level 6 is shown below. Level 6 modules may be capped at specific numbers, especially where they are taught by a single member of staff.
4. Modules with appropriate Language or Literature content taught in other departments may also be accepted as part of the subject component. A typical example is IRIS311 James Joyce and Ireland.
5. In addition to the modules listed below, students have the option of taking a dissertation module. This may be taken as 30 credits in Semester 1 (ENGL311) or Semester 2 (ENGL379) or as a year-long module (ENGL380). Only one of the dissertation modules may be taken by each student.
6. Students on this subject component will take one 30-credit module and one 15-

7. Students on this subject component have the option of taking SOTA300 Placement Module at level 5 or level 6. Students may not normally take SOTA300 and a Dissertation module, even if SOTA300 was taken as a level 5 module.

8. The range of modules offered at each of Levels 5 and 6 ensures that students’ choices are drawn from a number of periods, genres and points of origin, or result in them studying language at the micro and macro level and in a range of contexts. The extent to which certain of the Subject-based learning outcomes are attained above Level 4 will vary for individual students, depending on the individual modules opted for.

9. The Literature modules at Level 5 comprise survey courses (worth 30 credits) covering all the major periods and genres after 1350. These are taught collaboratively by several members of staff and normally have no ceilings on the number of students accepted. At Level 6, the modules are typically oriented towards generic and/or thematic concerns, which build on the broad-scope knowledge imparted by the Level 5 period modules, and provide training in the deeper exploration of major literary topics. Modules at Level 6 typically draw on the research interests of particular members of staff and ensure that opportunities are offered to study non-canonical and more specialist material, and the relations between literature and other disciplines. The Level 6 modules are designed to complement those at Level 5, allowing students to pursue their own learning agendas against the background of those modules. Level 6 modules require a greater degree of independence, particularly because the students choose, in individual consultation with their tutors, their own topics to focus on for essay projects, which make up at least one-third of the assessed work for all modules.
34. Industrial placement/work placement/year abroad:

There is a dedicated work placement SOTA300, which students may take as part either of their level 5 or their level 6 study. SOTA300 is a 30 credit module which can be taken either as a year-long or as a second semester module.

Students may apply to participate in one of the exchange schemes offered by the School, with universities in mainland Europe, America and Australia. Modules taken during the exchanges are credited as part of the marks counting towards the degree according to University guidelines on equivalence.

Part E: Learning, Teaching And Assessment Strategies

36. Learning, Teaching and Assessment Strategies:

English UG degree subject components operate under the teaching and learning policies of the Department of English and the University of Liverpool. The entire teaching, learning and assessment programme is subject to approval from departmental, School and Faculty Committees. Teaching, learning and assessment strategies are outlined in the student handbook and module outlines.

No modules are taught entirely through lectures: the majority have lectures followed by sessions in smaller groups; and for some modules lectures are not felt to be appropriate. At Levels 5 and 6 students participate to a greater or lesser extent in a range of other formative activities: seminar presentations, creative writing, performance, directing, data searches and other IT activities, peer teaching, computer-based corpus exploration, etc. The skills inculcated in these activities are not at present assessed across the board; but the department is discussing means by which this can be achieved for certain of these skills, particularly those of oral presentation. Word-processing of assessed essays is a requirement; students who are not yet IT-literate are required to take appropriate University training courses by the end of Level 4.

The students’ experience of learning, teaching and assessment is designed to be differentiated between levels particularly along the dimensions of independence, of scope, and of contextualisation in terms of literary and socio-cultural contexts and of critical and/or theoretical approaches.

At Level 4, the activities in which students engage - whether in tutorials, as coursework, or as assessed work - are specified and are of a scope which, while restricted in comparison with those at higher levels, challenges the students’ assumptions about “doing English”. They are introduced to the concept of the contextualisation of works in terms of literary tradition and genre, and to methodologies of reading. Throughout Level 4, there is a focus on instilling the skills of close, attentive reading of texts, which the department regards as one of its main strengths. In the Language modules, the students are closely guided in the analyses that they are asked to undertake.

At Level 5, the activities are guided - essay titles are given, data for analysis is provided where appropriate, etc. - but the scope widens and deepens. In Literature, students explore the development of literary forms in a particular period, and begin to broaden their concept of what constitutes literature in English. In Language, the generalist, descriptive approach adopted so far is refined by the introduction of more specific approaches: some develop issues raised at Level 4, such as the history of English, while... others bring in new perspectives, such as language as a psycholinguistic phenomenon. While a reliance on close reading continues, there is a focus in Literature on an investigation of periodicity and the climate of ideas in which the texts are situated, and students are given access to an appropriate critical terminology. In Language, there is a move towards the contextualisation of linguistic exploration in terms of broader socio-cultural, cognitive and philosophical issues.

At Level 6, the emphasis shifts towards independent applications of the knowledge and skills acquired at previous levels: students may choose to write a dissertation on a topic of their choice; essay projects are designed by the students in consultation with tutors and are individually supervised; students construct their own bibliographies; and they select/collect the texts and/or data on which their projects are based and decide on the most appropriate approach to use. The scope of the enquiry widens: they are required to do more reading around their topics, in terms of both related texts and secondary criticism (in the case of Literature), and in terms of alternative approaches and current research (in the case of Language). In Literature, there is an increased focus on the contextualisation both of texts and of critical responses to those texts, in which the act of reading – the students’ own and that of others - is foregrounded and directly considered. In Language, there is greater contextualisation in terms partly of investigation of the ideological and socio-cultural factors construed by linguistic choices, and partly of a critical exploration of how different approaches to linguistic data illuminate different aspects of that data.

Students are provided with explicit statements of the criteria by which their work is assessed and tutor feedback is given in a standard format which makes reference to the criteria.

The Student Handbook available to all students includes guidelines on effective essay writing and appropriate conventions for referencing in both Literature and Language essays. These are explicitly highlighted at an early stage in the tutorials for Level 4 modules.

36a. Learning, Teaching and Assessment methods:

Learning and teaching methods include lectures, tutorials, seminars and workshops. Teaching groups are referred to as tutorials if they involve between 6 and 10 students; seminars groups are larger, but do not normally exceed 18; workshops are similar in size but have a more distinct practical element (e.g. in drama or language modules). The students are thus involved in a good deal of working in groups, as well as directed individual work.

All modules include assessed written coursework of one kind or another - essays, analytical exercises, projects. Assessment is designed within the department’s template for assessed work, which ensures as far as possible parity of workload. Although it is impossible to calibrate exactly the relative demands of essays, examinations, oral presentations, etc., as a baseline assessed work of, or equivalent to, 4000 words per 15 credits is required. Many modules also include some coursework in which the main focus is formative: this normally takes the form of a formatively assessed essay or other work similar to the assessed work that will be required, though in a few cases it consists of one or more pieces of assessed work which together count for only a small proportion of the final mark. Whether or not the work is assessed, it is designed to have a formative function (it is worth noting that students receive written feedback on all assessed coursework, even if it is submitted at the end of semester in the examination period). Feedback is given on standard pro-formas and all markers are expected to use the agreed marking descriptors.

In Semester 1, the syllabus includes a week in which teaching is replaced by individual work on assigned tasks with appropriate guidance and support. Some tasks are specifically related to the learning outcomes of the modules being taken, while others, disseminated through VITAL, are more generic. The aim is to provide students with scheduled time and support before the module ends to reflect on the input and thus extend their understanding of the content, and, equally importantly, to interrogate their own learning approach and study skills in relation to the module and more broadly to the subject component.

Modules are assessed by a variety of methods, including traditional examinations, seen and open-book exams, the dissertation, projects, essays, analytical exercises, presentations, or a mix of these. A template for assessment has been agreed which ensures that each taught unit carries a broadly equivalent assessment load, while preserving the present variety of assessment methods, which students value. All modules are assessed at the end of the semester in which they are taught. Details of the assessment method for individual modules can be obtained from the descriptions of individual modules. These are designed to reflect the changes in independence, scope and contextualisation outlined above.

37. Assessment information for students:

Code of Practice on Assessment

The University has a Code of Practice on Assessment which brings together the main institutional policies and rules on assessment. The Code is an authoritative statement of the philosophy and principles underlying all assessment activities and of the University’s expectations in relation to how academic subjects design, implement and review assessment strategies for all taught programmes of study.

The Code of Practice includes a number of Appendices which provide more detail on the regulations and rules that govern assessment activity; these include:

- The University marks scale, marking descriptors and qualification descriptors;
- The model for non-clinical first degree programmes;
- The system for classifying three-year, non-clinical, undergraduate degrees;
- The system for classifying four-year, non-clinical, undergraduate degrees that include a year in industry or a year abroad;
- Information about students’ progress, including guidance for students;
- The procedure for assessment appeals;
- Regulations for the conduct of exams;
- The University’s policy on making adjustments to exam arrangements for disabled students.
- The code of practice relating to external examining (see also below)
- The Academic Integrity Policy, which covers matters such as plagiarism and collusion and includes guidance for students;
- The policy relating to mitigating circumstances which explains what you should do if you have mitigating circumstances that have affected assessment; and
- The policy on providing students with feedback on assessment.

A summary of key assessment information is also available in the ‘Your University’ handbook.
Marking criteria:
The marking descriptors for the Department of English will be used in marking all work on this subject component. These are available on the website and in the Student Handbook.

Part F: Student Representation And Feedback

38. Student representation and feedback:
As per the Code of Practice on Student Representation (http://www.liv.ac.uk/tqsd/pol_strat_cop/cop_on_student_representation.doc) students are able to engage formally with the University in a number of ways as: Course Representatives, Student Representatives, Faculty Student Voice Coordinators or Liverpool Guild of Students Student Representative Officers. A Staff-Student Liaison Committee (SSLC) for the department of English will be established in accordance with the University Code of Practice on Student Representation. The SSLC will provide students with the opportunity to formally participate / raise any issues and receive feedback to disseminate to their peers. The SSLC will normally meet at least 3 times a year with the membership, terms of reference and manner in which it conducts business conforming to the requirements of the Annex to the Code of Practice on Student Representation. Elections to the SSLC will be carried out within the structure determined by the university student representation steering group, and any representatives will be encouraged to attend training provided by the Guild of Students.

Part G: Status Of Professional, Statutory Or Regulatory Body Accreditation

39. Status of Professional, Statutory or Regulatory Body Accreditation:
N/A

Part H: Diversity & Equality Of Opportunity And Widening Participation

38. Diversity & Equality of Opportunity and Widening Participation:
The subject component design, structure and content are consistent and comply with the University’s Diversity and Equal Opportunities Policy (http://www.liv.ac.uk/diversity-and-equality/policies/).
Within the department of English there is a diverse student population consisting of a wide ethnic mix, Home/EU and International students and a number of mature students. The annual subject review (ASR) identifies where there may be particular difficulties placed on a particular group of students allowing for any processes to ensure equality can be put into place.
The department of English strives to ensure that all students, whatever their background, have a good range of opportunities to enhance their employability and skills throughout their programme of study.
